Such meetings would be largely attended by all clauses, and represented by every branch of business, now clamoring for relief. But we do not consider such a movement on the part of the people necessary to induce our public servants to obey the will of their masters. There is not a man in the legislature who does not understand the desires of his constituents-how anxiously they pray for relief from the taxes which have impoverished many, and which threaten the ruin of others. It has justly been said that taxation is the jailer that imprisons the trade, commerce, business, growth and developbe a half century before our national debt is paid off, and Tennessee ought to be allowed twenty or thirty years to extinguish liabilities contracted by fraud and poachers upon the rights of

With sad hearts they point to half their former wealth and trebled taxation, their property destroyed by the war, their old system of labor revolutionized and demoralized, while they are prepared neither by education nor money to accommodate themselves to the situation. At one blow the whole of our slave property was destroyed; our loss in bank and other stocks and securities amounts to millions of dol lars, and in horses, hogs, and cattle to millions more. These causes have decreased the value of lands since the war, and as nearly every man is in land to pay taxes, should they be still imposed, the legislature is entreated to save their constituents from bankruptcy. Dear Sir-I have received your official nouscement that the convention which you recently presided at Spring-field, selected me as their candidate for Governor. I feel very sensibly such a to-ken of the confidence of a large number of fallow-citizens and I gratefully accept the honor. It is unnecessary for me at this day to rehearse to my friends in Massadebt and will be forced to sell his chusetts my opinions upon public affairs spitomized in the resolves adopted by the convention. They have undergone no recent change. Now, as formerly, I think t wise to use calm and moderate methor party or the individual that advo-cates or supports high taxes in such an hour of gloom and distress, will commit political suicide, for the people will consign all such heartless and merciless agents to the care of the constitution of the United States would protect, to the ruin of a concitizens who have disputed the plan of adjustment required by the party in power, so long as it was debatable, acqui-suce chearfully when once it has become irrevocable.
